EDWARDIAN ECCENTRICS - DISTANCE WALKING POSTCARDS (X8)

A collection of 8 postcards, all featuring people from the late Victorian and Edwardian eras attempting extreme and sometimes downright barmy feats of endurance. During this period it became a very popular spectator activity and attracted many eccentrics to attempt their own sometimes fanciful feats of endurance. These cards include: George M Schilling, the American who claimed to be going around the world pushing a large globe; Mlle. Florence, who was walking on top of a globe from London to Brighton; W.R. Hayes, who was trundling 2 large cart wheels from Portsmouth to Newcastle and back; Henry Bensley, who attempted in 1908 to walk around the world wearing an iron mask and pushing a pram; J. Green, the poet who walked 5,100 miles in 1889 pushing a pram; Anton Hanslian, who walked around the world pushing his wife and child in a pram; Henri Mosse, the French globetrotter; and C.W. Allen, who used Bovril to keep him going during his extreme walks.
