ALLISON CALLING: A GALAXY OF FOOTBALL AND OTHER MEMORIES

George Frederick Allison (1888-1957) was Arsenal's second longest-serving manager (after Wenger), serving the club from 1934 to 1947, during which time they won the League Championship twice (1934-35, 1937-38) and the FA Cup (1935-36). He famously appeared as himself in a speaking role in the 1939 film The Arsenal Stadium Mystery which was set at Highbury. One of his lines, uttered at half-time, was: "It's one-nil to the Arsenal. That's the way we like it.", a line which was oddly prescient given the team's record of 1-0 scorelines in later decades.

CRICKET IN BARBADOS

Bruce Hamilton (1900-1974) was the brother of the dramatist Partrick Hamilton, author of such classic as Hangover Square and Gaslight. Also a writer, Bruce's literary career took in both cricket and the history of British colonies in the Caribbean, especially during the 35 years he lived in Barbados. He wrote this history of cricket on his adopted island "as a means of escape from the worries and miseries of the early years of the war" and dedicated it to the memory of HBG Austin and George Challenor, two "greats" of West Indies and Barbados cricket.

THE HAPPY WARRIOR - BIOGRAPHY OF COLLIE SMITH (SIGNED BY SOBERS)

A short biography of the highly regarded West Indies international cricketer of the 1950s, with photographic illustrations. On September 7th 1959 Garry Sobers was driving his West Indian team mates Smith and Tom Dewdney from Lancashire down to London for charity cricket match when the car struck a cattle truck. Smith had been sleeping on the back seat and had been thrown forward, breaking his back. He died from his injuries three days later. Sobers was held responsible and found guilty of careless driving.

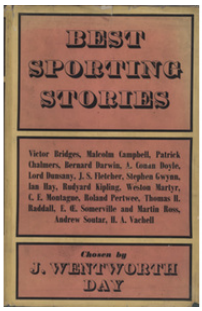

8vo. 63pp. Original stiff-card covers bound into blue-leather boards with gilt titles. A very good copy. Signed to inside cover by Garry Sobers with an inscription to the previous owner, a great collector of Caribbean cricket literature who has also recorded his purchase of the book to flyleaf and added his full name and address. It seems that the front cover is also signed by Percival Gibson, who was Bishop of Jamaica at the time and attended the funeral service. A very rare booklet.
